GOLDMAN GETS A REMBRANDT.

The typical example of Rembrandt,

The history of the work can be traced back, without interuption, to the time of Empress Catherine of Russia. Her feature of the wedding last week minister, Prince Lavalle, first brought agent for, the Empress in her acquisition of Old Masters. Among these old works, which now form the greatest feature of the Hermitage in St. Petersburg, were many Rembrandts of about the same period and style as this one of "St. Bartholomew," which the Prince chose to keep for himself. On his death, his collection passed to his daughter, who had become Princess Troubetzkoy, and for that reason this Bartholomew picture was known for the time in Russia as the "Troubetzkoy Rembrandt."

Again in her turn the Princess left this picture to one of her daughters, her famous collection having been divided among her three children, in which division the Rembrandt fell to the share of the one who had married a certain Davydoff. From this lady the picture was inherited by her grandson, Was-sylyj Davydoff, the late owner, who had it for some years at his country seat near Kiev, Russia, from whence it came through Duveen Bros. to Mr. Goldman. An article written by Dr. Bode in

The Cicerone," July last, said: "A matter of universal interest lately has been the discovery of some pictures by Rembrandt, hitherto practically unknown. One of these is a dignified representation of a man advanced in years, holding a knife in his hand. The previous owner was a Rus-sian nobleman, who had it at his country seat in the neighbourhood of Kiev. The picture had been very much neglected, and was in a very dirty condition. After being cleaned, however, it proved in a perfect state of preservation. A book in the man's hand alone changed during the cleaning process, and revealed itself to be a knife, which had apparently appeared too prosaic to some previous owner." to some previous owner."

"If we have done right in considering various other such character figures as intended by the artist for the figures of apostles— all of which figures, like this one, belong to the master's later period—then in this case we should regard the knife as an emblem, and recognise in this figure the Apostle Bartholomew. The cleaning brought to light the fine signature, and, further, the date 1657. The color shows the somewhat monochrome, but clear grey brown tone, almost without individual notes, of local color—as in a number of other pictures of the same -Pictures by the early Brit- clude such notable and rarely valuable in "The Spear Carrier" of the same year.

The handling of this St. Bartholomew picture is, perhaps, more masterly, both as to its drawing, and its broad, direct brushwork. The figure is life size and seen to the knees." Raeburn.

The display reflects the greatest credit on Mr. Ederheimer, and the beautifully illustrated and well compiled catalog of the exhibition—the most com-plete and satisfactory of its kind ever held in New York, should and doubtless will be found in the library of every collector and lover of black and white.

In a thoughtful and well-written intro-duction to the catalog, Mr. Ederheimer ac-knowledges his indebtedness for the display to the owner of the majority of the prints, Mr. Junius S. Morgan, and then pro-ceeds to give a historical resumé of early Italian engravers, from the wonderfully delicate work shown in the Nielli, the work of the early Florentine engravers, the prints attributed to Baledini and his school, the Tarocchi cards (a complete set of which is shown) to Raimondi and the great Mantegna. From thence he takes the reader through the work of the followers of Mantegna, especially Andrea, and da of Mantegna, especially Andrea and da Brescia, to the Venetian da Barbari, and the later and remarkable Campagnola, the catalog, concluding with a notice and characteristic illustration of a print by Jacope Francia. It is impossible to discuss in any detail this important exhibition in this first

WITH THE ARTISTS

Robert Vonnoh, who recently returned from a prolonged sojourn in his summer home at Grez-Sur-Loing, France, has taken a studio in the new Chesterwood prize. Studio building, 12 West 8 St., which was designed and built by Daniel Chester French, who occupies the whole first floor with an unusually spacious studio. Mr. Vonnoh brought back a group of landscapes and figure pictures, which quite surpass his previous good work. High keyed and joyous for the most part, they are most attractive. There is also a portrait of the late William A. Walker, a well known engraver, which does the artist much credit, and which is sure to be appreciated when he exhibits it this Winter. He is about to begin a portrait of Mr. Charles Francis Adams for the Boston Historical Society.

The first art event of the season at the Lotos Club is to be an exhibition of American Paintings from the collection of Mr. William T. Evans, which opens to-night with a reception and will continue until Thursday next.

The Union League Club's first art exhibition of the season will be held next week, Dec. 12-14. The display promises to be an unusually interesting one. An important Sargent "Carrara Marble Quarries," owned by Mr. T. M. Dick and shown at the last Royal Academy, will have the place of honor.

COMING PORTRAIT EXHIBIT.

The second annual exhibition of the Society of American Portrait Painters, at Knoedler's next month, promises to be one of the most important art events of the season. Each of the thirty members is holding his or her best work for the display. Only one example of each member will be admitted, in order that the works may be hung to better advantage. It is the ambition of the Society to make the display both select and dig-

RUBENS' STS. PETER AND PAUL.

At the gallery of Mr. H. van Slo-chem, No. 477 Fifth Ave., there have lately been received two remarkable panel pictures by Rubens, life-size, standing, full-length presentments of Saints Peter and Paul, which formerly hung in the Church of the Capucines in Antwerp, and now come from the Museum of Ghent, Belgium.

These remarkable pictures, which would most appropriately hang in the Metropolitan or some other leading American Art Museum, have astounding virility, even for Rubens, and are veritable tours de force. Even to the worldly minded, Rubens' conception of the two great Apostles must convey a most satisfactory and convincing idea of their personality. Both Saints look straight from out the canvas, their strong lineaments and dignified lofty expression, comporting well with their erect carriage, and robust figures. dinner at the club house last week, the guest of honor was J. INNESS PORTRAIT FOUND.

While the old mansion occupied by George Inness in Montclair was recently overhauled, a portrait was found of the dead artist believed to have been painted by Inness himself, and said to be his only known portrait.

The discovery of the picture was made known through its presentation to the Montclair Art Association by Mr. Herwick C. Dodge, who found it a few weeks ago in the old Inness mansion on Grove street, recently purchased by a real estate syndicate.

BUREAU OF EXPERTIZING.

Advice as to the placing at public or private sale of art works of all kinds, pictures, sculptures, furniture, bibelots, etc., will be given at the office of the American Art News, and also counsel as to the value of art works and the obtaining of the best "expert" opinion on the same. For these services a nominal fee will be charged. Persons having art works and desirous of disposing or obtaining an idea of their value, will find our service on these lines a saving of time, and, in many instances, of unnecessary expense. It guarantees that any opinion given will be so given without regard to personal or commercial motives.

THE CROWDING SEASON.

Good evidence that the art season, which has lagged of late, is now fairly under way, is afforded by the fact that the Art News, a most trustworthy barometer of art trade and life, is obliged to leave out from its columns this week, an unusual amount of both new and advertising matter, while both kinds of matter continue to crowd in upon us to an extent, difficult to handle.

We had wished to discuss editorially this week the question of art appraisals, brought to the fore by the surprising victory of a Mrs. Roskilley over a Fire Insurance Co. through which she recovered $14,000, sued for, for some claimed Old Masters destroyed by fire, etc., and to publish reproductions of several important pictures, recently ac quired by American collectors.

But these other interesting matter abundant.

"Greek Refinements," by William Henry oodvear. M.A. The Yale University The Yale University The Oxford University Goodyear, M.A. Press, New Haven. Press, London. $10.00 net.

This original volume, the only extant work on Greek Refinements, the result of some thirty-five years of careful study and esearch on the part of Professor ear, who as Curator of Fine Arts of the Brooklyn Institute, and member of the Royal Academies of Venice, Rome and Royal dilan, is eminently qualified for the authorship of such a work.

To archeologists and architects the book is invaluable, but it is far from being a dry, technical treatise, as all references to technicalities are in an appendix. The necessarily dry parts are thus omitted for the reader who reads for his own pleasure and TAPESTRIES-Their Origin, History and Renaissance, by George Leland Hunter. Square 8vo. cloth, $5.00, net. The John Lane Co., 116 W. 32 St., New York.

This beautifully printed and richly illustrated volume appears at a psychological time, when the study and collecting of tap-estries has become more than a "fad." The interest in the history and manufacture of these old and modern weaves is widespread among art lovers, and Mr. Hunter's unusu-ally able and well-written story of the origin and history of tapestries, to which is added a description of their technique and texture, the Renaissance in tapestries, and a chapter on the care of tapestries, which last is in every art library, and boudoir as well.

LONDON LETTER.

London, Nov. 27, 1912.

The works of the late Sir L. Alma Tadema are to form the winter exhibition at Burlington House, and the Council of the Royal Academy are now inviting communications from owners willing to lend canvases by the artist. There s every prospect that the show will be a arge and representative one.

The purchase by Sir William Lever of Stafford House, the magnificent town residence of the Duke of Sutherland, has caused considerable interest, especially as has been officially announced that it is the intention of the purchaser to devote the famous house to some public or national purpose. If, as has been rumored, the palace (for it is little less) is to become the home of a historical collection of English furniture, it will indeed be a welcome addition to the treasure-houses of London. It is not improbable, however, that it may be devoted to a chronological exhibition of British watercolors, of which Sir William possesses a large and interesting collection. It will be remembered that some years ago he bought the entire collection of the late James Orrock and that some fine Turners have come into his ownership. The ceilings at Stafford House are particularly interesting. The picture gallery manship from some of her subject has one painted by Guercino, and wished to curry favor with her. the ante-room another, painted by Veronese. There are both atmosphere and temperament in the studies of the River Thames by Samuel Teed, now shown at the Paterson Gallery in Bond St. It is no exaggeration to assert that not even more beauty from the greys and greens of our river wharves, shipping and riverside buildings, or to indicate with greater clarity the atmospheric conditions under which these are seen. It is no easy mather to do justice to the mystery that ter to do justice to the mystery that clothes our riverside and changes with the seasons and the hours, but Mr. Teed has penetrated to its heart as far as it is humanly possible, and the result is some artistic gems which it is good to see.

CHINA'S ART TREASURES.

The London Daily Express in a recent issue said that negotiations are now n progress for the most sensational art sale ever known for the dispersal at auction of the wonderful treasures of the imperial palaces of China. The collection, which includes the finest specimens of every form of Chinese porcelains and ceramics, is unique and its value is so enormous that it can only be described as fabulous.

The Chinese palaces were vast storehouses of art treasures. The late Dowager Empress was an assiduous collector and used to receive on her birthday anniversaries quantities of bronzes, black pearls and gold ornaments of rare workmanship from some of her subjects who ence Esté and Van Parys are virtuosos.

PARIS LETTER.

November 27, 1912.

The "International Art Union" exhibition at the Galerie Roger Lévesque, Faubour St. Honoré, is composed of the works of a feminine "group," which American women artists domn exhibitions in Montreal and Toronto, inate. The exhibition is not without interest, but I think the selection should have been more severe. Only a few really distinguished artists are represented. Many miniatures, etchings and sculptures should have been eliminated. I wonder why Miss Mary Cassatt is not among the exhibitors, as she is the best American woman artist here. I note the usual feminine defect; the faculty of assimilation is widespread; and all the artists copy more or less, Richard Miller or Charles

At the Ehrich Galleries, No. 463 Fifth Ave., there is now, among other well chosen and typical examples of the early Flemish, Dutch, Spanish and Italian schools, a most attractive, full length standing presentment of Lavinia, the daughter of Titian, when aged seven, by Paris Bordone. Not only is the canvas in every way typical of the painter, but it has an allure in the sweet, childish expression and the beau-

red brocaded velvet long gown. No more charming child's portrait by an early master has been shown in New York galleries in many a day.

> At the Anderson Galleries, Madison Ave. and 40 St., there is now on exhibition the noted collection of mats, rugs and carpets of great variety and beauty, formed by Mr. W. D. Ellwanger, of Rochester, N. Y., and which will be sold at auction on Friday afternoon and evening next, Dec. 13.

There will be on exhibition next week in the same galleries, the portraits, figure works and landscapes, together with a number of sketches, from the studio of the late Frank Fowler, the well-known and lamented American artist, and executed by him during his the top floor of the C. J. Charles Building, 718 Fifth Ave. The walls of the galleries have been hung with real times. These will be sold by auction in the galleries on Monday evening, 718 Fifth Ave. The walls of the galleries have been hung with real times.

A few important points of the Ellwanger sale may be emphasized. First, every rug in this Collection is the property of Ellwanger; second, he has revised the catalog descriptions himself and believes them to be accurate; third, he gives his personal guarantee that every rug is a genuine and worthy piece; that not a single rug has been "doctored," "treated," or "washed with chemicals," and that all the rugs are free from aniline dyes. The sale, therefore, will portant set of Lang-yao greens. There is also a remarkable group of three most interesting and important ever held in New York.
